JOSEPH R. TAYLOR, | Secretaries. Our City Election.

Eight days hence the Voters of New-York will elect a Mayor. Alms-House Commissioner. Common Council, and various Judicial, Ward and School Officers for the year ensuing. Near as is the day, there is as yet no general excitement, and we trust there will be none. Let the People inquire candidly, judge calmly, and vote as the general good shall dictate. The number, variety and importance of the offices to be filled will pretty certainly draw out a good vote, and the absence of ex citement will incite many to disregard party con siderations in the choice of purely Municipal offi cers. We trust this will especially be the case with regard to Judicial stations. There are but few days wherein to select and present candidates

There are but few days wherein to select and present candidates for these stations, and we exhort every voter to disregard politics whenever he knows one candidate for Justice to be upright and capable, white his opponent is not so. And should no suitable by it—as he would have done two years ago. The bought he end of all things would be precipitated by it—as he would have done two years ago. The world moves on, and those who refuse to march together to nominate a fit man, and let such man receive the votes of honest men of all parties. Give as pure justice at all hazards.

—We rejoice that the rival candidates for Mayor are both eminently fit and trust worthy. Mr. Brady has served the City faithfully and creditably: so has Mr. Havenever. Each is in the prime of life, industrious and vigilant by the habits of his whole life; neither would lay claim to extraordinary talents, but each has filled various Manifelpal effices with general approbation. Still more: the election of either will be a verdict of this great City in favor of the principle of Free Soil for Free Labor and against the extension of Slavery over any portion of the vast territories about to be acquired from Mexico. In spite of the arduous exertions of the fire companies, which were promptly on the spot, the building and its contents, together with a small frame house on the rear in Reade-st, and some other buildings, were totally consumed.
